The Tatler Design Awards gathered creatives and homeowners to fête the stellar projects and achievements of local firms

The bold and exuberant Jazz Age has long fuelled the creative imagination of architects, designers and artists alike. In the world of interior design, it's closely associated with the Art Deco movement that's often referenced for its opulence and geometric compositions. At this year's Tatler Design Awards, its influence was clearly felt in a venue that celebrates the glamorous epoch.

Held at Caroline's Mansion—a new venue at St Regis Singapore—the theme of the awards dinner took inspiration from the Roaring Twenties. The table settings combined metallic accents, geometric patterns with sleek design and a splash of colour for a contemporary take on the iconic era; the displays featured bended marble tables from MM Galleri, accessories from Strange & Deranged and floral arrangements by Beato. A total of nine accolades were presented during the event, honouring the stellar residential and commercial projects completed in the previous year.

MARBLE MARVEL

Created using the bended marble technique by MM Galleri, the Hive table features a decorative cladding made with an ultra-thin and pliable layer of natural stone. Myriad types of stone can be applied to this sculptural design; the table featured here uses a layer of Scandinavian green granite. mmgalleri.com

DECORATIVE SPLENDOUR

Opened in January this year, Caroline's Mansion was designed in tribute to American society doyenne Caroline Astor, mother of John Jacob IV (the founder of the St Regis hotel chain). It draws inspiration from Astor's opulent home and the illustrious soirees that she hosted—every detail of this venue has been considered to celebrate the architectural elements of its namesake. Designed by Avalon Collective, the residential-style interior features timber wood marquetry flooring, brass trimmings and prismatic glass panels on the doors and walls; bespoke fittings that have transformed a former tennis court into a glamorous 4,000sqft venue.

At the foyer, a grand staircase and lift connects the two levels, with the stairway serving as the focal point of the voluminous space. In the ballroom, fabric and double-glazed glass panels improve the acoustics of the space, while a faux fireplace serves as its centerpiece, and above it a David Hockney painting from the hotelier's private collection. Custom-made wall sconces, modern candelabra-inspired chandeliers and mouth-blown glass and crystal pendant lights illuminate the space with a warm glow, while referencing the graphic arches on the walls and doorways.

OBJECTS OF DESIRE

Combining the glamorous influence of the Art Deco movement with eclectic accents, the Strange & Deranged items displayed here include decorative objects and frames from luxury home accessories brand L'Objet as well as sculptures by French artists Benoit Averly and Christian Martinon.
